Meet Abigail and Zoey, daughters of Jeremy and Stacy (Sell) Voigt. They are sisters who were born with severe hearing loss. Since 4 months old, the girls have been wearing hearing aids and going through extensive therapy. Unfortunately, despite therapy, the girls were still not able to develop adequate speech due to a lack of hearing quality. This past May, each of the girls underwent surgery to have a cochlear implant placed on the ear with the most hearing loss. Abigail is currently a student at Northern Voices, a non-profit private school in Roseville, Minnesota, that specializes in early childhood auditory-oral language education for the deaf and hard of hearing. With their help, Abigail went from speaking 20 words to 131 in only 6 months! Northern Voices therapy is essential in helping the girls learn how to hear and talk with their cochlear implants.

This benefit will help fund the expenses of the cochlear implants, the cost of Northern Voices tuition, and additional medical bills that are not covered by insurance.

Come meet Abigail and Zoey and see how they are doing! Without your support the girls would not be "hearing the possibilities."
